Accessing Harvard Business Review Articles and Harvard Business School Case Studies

1. Trexler Library provides full text access to Harvard Business Review articles via our EBSCO Business Source Elite database
   a. Find Business Source Elite on the library database page at http://desales.libguides.com/newdatabase or under “Find Articles” on the library home page
   b. Once in the database, scroll down to “Search Options” and look for a box labeled “Publication.” You can enter Harvard business review” and search the system for articles published in that journal
   c. You can also find Harvard Business Review by searching our “A to Z” list also under “Find Articles” on our homepage.
2. However, Harvard Business Review does not allow linking to their articles in BlackBoard, nor does it allow any other classroom use of these articles. You should not put a reference to a Harvard Business Review articles on your syllabus.

3. You can suggest that students search the Business Source Elite to find materials on their own.

4. If you wish to create a course pack of articles for your course, you can do this at the Harvard Business Publishing for Educators http://cb.hbsp.harvard.edu/. You will need to register to receive educational access. Students can purchase your course packs from this site.

5. Course packs for Harvard Business School Case Studies can also be arranged on the Harvard Business Publishing site mentioned above.

   Trexler library owns about 16 Harvard Business School Cast Studies in paper form, and they are available via our catalog.
